Algonquins of Pikwakanagan First Nation

Kwey Kinaweya,

Gehtigeh Animikii Beneseh n'dezhnikaaz, Mkwa Dodem. Kitchinendaam mumpi Pikwàkanagàn nongwa. I am Spotted Thunderbird of the Bear Clan, and I am happy to be in Pikwàkanagan.

Good day, my name is Alan Ozawanimke, and I am honoured to be back in Pikwàkanagan. I am currently on a 6-month contract with the Algonquins of Pikwàkanagan First Nation Limited Partnership (AOPFNLP). The work and progress of AOPFN is an exciting experience to be a part of.

The opportunity brings me closer to my family here and the chance to spend more time with my son, daughter and grandkids. I am familiar with many in the community as I have spent years here as an active part of the community employed as a manager in Economic Development and Executive Director at the turn of the century.

Since my professional departure, my career path led me to manage the Anishinabek Nation/Seventh Generation Charity/ Anishinabek Nation Management Group as Chief Executive Officer (CEO); the North Shore Tribal Council, of 7 First Nations as CEO; the simultaneous responsibility as CEO of my home community of Sagamok Anishnawbek/ Sagamok Development Corporation/ Z'gamok Enterprises Inc.; leading to Chief of my community. I had the unique opportunity to own my own trucking business before I embarked as CEO for 1534 Kanata Inc., a private business venture.

I have become very familiar with the development and opportunities of private/public corporate partnerships for the long-term benefit of our communities. The work of AOPFNLP is substantial as it will create a path of self-sufficiency for the community that reduces the influence of government on the Omamiwinini; A dream I share for the benefit of our grandkids and future generations.

I look forward to my time here and seeing many of you again.

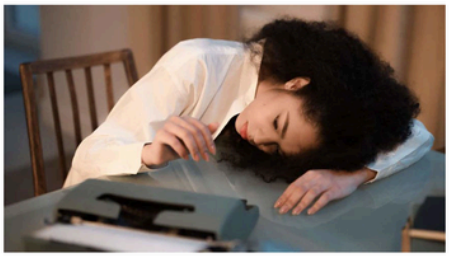
Things you should know about vitamin B12



The Conversation, some people with low vitamin B12 may feel constantly exhausted, weak or short of breath. Others notice tingling in their hands and feet, poor balance, memory lapses or the familiar feeling of "brain fog". Scientists are now investigating whether the vitamin also helps keep mitochondria, the tiny power stations inside our cells, working efficiently.

Low B12 may reduce the body's ability to produce energy. While researchers say more human studies are needed, the findings could help explain why some people feel drained even before anaemia develops. Experts also stress that B12 injections are only proven to help those with a genuine deficiency, not people whose vitamin levels are already normal.

- Your body needs only a tiny amount of vitamin B12 each day, but it is essential for good health.
- It is naturally found in meat, fish, eggs and dairy products.
- Vegans and some vegetarians may need fortified foods or supplements.
- Older adults are at greater risk because the body absorbs less B12 with age.
- Long-term use of some medicines for diabetes or acid reflux can also affect absorption.
- Symptoms include tiredness, weakness, numbness, poor balance, memory problems and brain fog.
- Persistent fatigue should not be ignored, as many conditions can cause similar symptoms.
- A simple blood test can help doctors diagnose vitamin B12 deficiency.
- Supplements or injections should only be taken on medical advice if deficiency is confirmed.
- Looking after your vitamin B12 levels today could help protect your energy and wellbeing in the years ahead.
